

The Lady of the Lamp
by Justin and Harvey

Florence Nightingale liked reading books as a child. She was taught at home by her father. This made it hard for Florence because she would get distracted by her sister Parthenope.

Florence was determined to be a nurse and never gave up. She finally got the chance to train to become a nurse in Germany!

Awards/Later life

She was awarded the Royal Red Cross in 1883 and the Order of Merit in 1907.

Passing

Florence passed away at home on 13th August 1910 at the age of 90. She is still remembered today for her great efforts and changed theatre of nurses even to this date.
